LITERATURE, HISTORY AND SCIENCE.

Edited by

Dayld A. Weller.

One Volume, IAmo. 422 pages. Cloth, $1 25.

CONTENTS:

PART I.—Language, Literature and Books.

II.—Customs, Manners and Laws.

III.—History, Geography and Statistics.

IV.—The Physical Sciences.

V.—The Netural Sciences.

V.—The Present Sciences.

VI.—Arts and Manufactures.

The present volume is based upon a work bearing the same general title, published in London during the past year by John Timbs, the well-known author and compiler of several popular works. The rapid sale of twelve thousand copies of that book is sufficient evidence at once of its value and its popularity. The examination, however, of Mr. Timbe's book, preparatory to its re-publication here, showed that the original plan, though well executed, was succeptible of much improvement, not only by the correction of some errors and the omission of many articles of little value or of mere local interest, but also by the introduction of much additional information. A revision of the whole was therefore undertaken, and the result has been the production of an essentially new book.

The general idea of the work will be gathered from its title and from a glance at its contents. It contains many little items of information, gathered from the broad fields of literature, history and science, which are not contained in Encyclopedias and ordinary Hand-Beoks, and which are readily found when sought. In the department of the Physical and Natural Sciences, moreover, are contained many interesting results of modern revarch, of too recent date to have figured a place in ordinary scentific treatises. In a word, while this volume has little claim to a strictly scientific character, it is believed that it will be found at once useful, interesting and familiarly instructive.

The North American Review, in speaking of the larger work, eave:

A threefold interest attaches to this work. It claims emphatic notice as a record of national enterprise; it forms as important chapter in our diplomatic history; and it is permanently attractive as an embodiment of scientific facts. With each a degree and kind of interest as the basis of a new contribution to the honorable archives of American exploration, we cannot but congratulate the large number of residers who, bissed by one or another of the special claims we have designated, will expertly peruse this elegant publication, prepared, as it has been, with so eminent care, judgment and skill.

From a Pactor's Note Book.

By Robert Turneut., D.D.

Author of "Genins of Sectiand," "Christ of History," &c.
1 vol. 12mo., 342 pp. Price $1.

The author's intention has been to develop in a natural, vivid way, by steams of narratives, portraitures of characters, conversations, letters, &c., the divine or inner life.
The characters are real such as the author has met in his extended observation and experience among all classes of persons; some of them of great intelligence and worth, and others of an inquisitive, skeptical turn, including Students, Lawyers, Merchants, Literary Characters, Mechanics and others.
Some of the "Life Pictures" are of young men reclaimed from Skepticism. These will be found to possess a turilling interest. Some of the sketches are of characters remarkable for their gifts and graces. Those of William Bentley, the baker boy, and Hiravity Millers, one of the noblest men that them.

As if touches upon Harvard University, Theodore Parker, them.

As if touches upon Harvard University, Theodore Parker,

These Letters of a "Young American Merchant" containment information of use to the increantile community.

Remarkable for the intelligence, difficult of access, which they embody their graphic history of the rise and progress of that new world destined to wield the scepter of the Southern Seasy their statistical knowledge; the glow and sprightness of their descriptions and the amusing incidents they relate. The history of the countries through which the traveler passes is compressed into a few pages, and the commercial details are enlivered by humor and wit. Received with distinction by the metelent princes of the lands he visited, his opportunities were rare and envisible—reportunities which he has not falled to improve.

The suther, Mr. George Francis Train, went from Boston to rare and enviable—epportunities while he has not minorous.

The nother, Mr. George Francis Train, went from Beston to Australia in 1853, and established at Melbourne the prosperous House of "George F. Train & Co.," with which he is still connected, "During his residence of thirty-two months at Melbourne, he took a prominent and active part in all measures for the advancement of the Colony, and when he left, was honored with a complimentary dinner by the merchants of Melbourne. His portraval of the marvelors growth of that city, from its wharfless condition when he reached there, to its present commercial position, is a description of events which, it is probable, can never be repeated in any other portion of the globe.

THE CHILD'S BOOK OF NATURE.

FOR THE USE OF FAMILIES AND SCHOOLS;
INTERDED TO AID MOTHERS AND TEACHERS IN TRAINING CHILDREN IN THE OBSERVATION OF NATURE.

In Three Parts. ING CHILDREN IN THE OBSERVATION OF NATURE.

In Three Parts.

Part I. PLANTS.

Part II. ANIMALS.

Part III. ANIMALS.

BY WORTHINGTON HOOKER, M. D.

Author of "Physician and Patient," Human Physiology," &c.

BEAUTIFICLLY ILLUSTRATED.

The three parts, complete in one volume, square idine,, imadin, 41 25; separately, muslin, 30 cents each.

A beautiful and useful work. It presents a general survey of the kingdom of Nature in a manner calculated to attract the attention of the child, and at the same time to furnish him with securate and important scientific information. The first part is devoted to the vegetable world—plants, flowers and fruits. The second part treats of animals, and the third of air, water, heat, light, etc. Although written for children, it is a beautiful and interesting treaties, which may be read with pleasure by persons of all ages. While the work is well suited as a class book for schools, its fresh and simple style cannot fail to render it a great favorite for family reading.

II.

EVADING WITHOUT TEARS:

READING WITHOUT TEARS;
Or, A PLEASANT MODE OF LEARNING TO READ
By the author of "The Perp of Day," Numerous Illustrations, square Islume, muslin, 50 cents.
"A delicious book for the little ones to learn to read. The arrangement of it is perfect, so as to carry the little scholar along from sound to sound, teaching by practice the value of each letter, and illustrated by beautiful cuts, so as to keep the child interested on every page. It is the best child's first book extant."

111. ISABEL:
THE YOUNG WIFE AND THE OLD LOVE.
By J. C. JEAFFRESON.
The Devel in which the author maintains the good position his first work obtained for him."

The present work we are satisfied, will keep up the popularity of Mr. Jeaffreson's pen. It abounds in clever and sarcestic sketches of society, in striking instances and lively discassic sketches of society, in striking instances and lively discassic sketches of society in striking instances and lively discassic sketches of society. It abounds in the habits of legislators and literary men. Such a novel is sure to take."

"We recognize in Agnes Strickland the most genial and appreciative, and yet, at the same time, the most truthful and incompromising among all the historians of the reign of this lovely love-iern, love-lost Soveneign. Mary Stuart, as Queen, as wife, as mother, as womans—Mary, in all her weakness of will and in all her strength of endurance—Mary, as she shows forth in her short dived pomp, and as she appeared afterward in her profracted sufferings—in all her various characters, in all her awful, and doubly awful, because sudden and rupid, alternations of fortune—is here, in the masterity memorial of her career, portrayed so vividity and so touchingly, that it is impossible for the most philegrands to do otherwise than lang over the narrative, carried onward with it is its flow by the strong force of a scarcely resistible fascination."
